Passion for music and performing came early for him at the age of 7 years old when he was offered a scholarship to theatre school. He grew up listening to artists such as Christina Grimmie and Lauren Aquilina who inspired him to make covers online armed with nothing more than GarageBand and a cheap microphone.

He made the leap to releasing original music in 2018 with the first single Risk It All for Love which was described as ‘Great Pop’ by BBC’s Alan Raw. He has continued to use music as a personal outlet over the years covering topics such as loneliness, abandonment, moving on & more. Since then, he’s garnered attention from BBC Introducing, BIMM, Vanquish Music, Monk Jack Publishing, and GetSung and has performed with Years & Years, Anne-Marie & Red.

In EP.1 of his brand new podcast 'Behind The Track' he expresses "if you're going to take anything away from this, please make it that you text or call your loved ones and show how much they mean to you, you never know what's around the corner".

“Setting the bar sky-high for himself and other artists alike” - John Gibson-Baccoli.
