Mango Drawing Marks 20 Years of Hand-Drawn Vector Artwork as Customer Base Passes 9,000

The vector conversion and embroidery digitizing company still redraw every file by hand and delivers in 24 hours or less

Los Angeles, California Oct 31, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Mango Drawing, a provider of vector conversion and embroidery digitizing services for businesses across the USA, is marking twenty years since its founder began redrawing artwork by hand in 2006. The company reports that it now works with more than 9,000 regular customers.

Mango Drawing redraws low-resolution logos and images as clean, scalable vector files for printing, engraving, signage and apparel. Every file is drawn manually by its designers rather than generated with automatic tracing software, a practice at the core of the business.

After eight years of vector redrawing work, the founder assembled a team of experienced designers and established Mango Drawing in 2014. The company added embroidery digitizing in 2018, custom embroidered patches in 2020 and sticker production in 2025.

"When I started in 2006, the job was simple to describe and hard to do well: take a blurry image and turn it into something a printer can trust," said Kaylee, owner of Mango Drawing. "Twenty years later, that hasn't changed. Software can trace an image in seconds, but it can't tell which edge matters. People come back to us because a person checks every curve before the file leaves our hands."

Most vector orders are delivered within 24 hours of payment, with rush delivery within three hours available at no extra charge. Standard files are supplied in AI, EPS and PDF, with SVG, CDR and other formats on request. Embroidery files are hand-digitized, sewn out and sent with a scan of the stitched result. Pricing starts at $6 for simple vector artwork.

Customers include screen printers, embroidery shops, promotional product distributors, uniform manufacturers, schools, sports teams and small businesses.
