Denver to Aspen Transportation Ready for Aspen Mountain and Snowmass Thanksgiving Opening Day

Mountain Star Transportation offers private Denver to Aspen transportation and car service from Denver Airport to Aspen and Snowmass as both mountains open November 26.

Denver, Colorado Nov 24, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - With Aspen Mountain and Snowmass scheduled to open for the 2026/27 ski season on Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, November 26, Mountain Star Transportation is reminding holiday visitors that private Denver to Aspen transportation can be reserved ahead for a door-to-door ride from Denver International Airport (DEN) to Aspen and Snowmass Village hotels, condos and vacation homes.

Aspen Snowmass has announced that Aspen Mountain and Snowmass will both open on Thanksgiving, subject to snow and weather conditions, with Aspen Highlands and Buttermilk following on Saturday, December 12. That makes the holiday week the first big arrival window of the season for skiers flying into Denver and heading west to the Roaring Fork Valley.

The trip from DIA to Aspen is one of the longest resort transfers in Colorado. In winter, Independence Pass on Highway 82 is closed, so the route runs about 200 miles west on I-70 through the Eisenhower-Johnson Memorial Tunnel, over Vail Pass and through Glenwood Canyon before turning up Highway 82 at Glenwood Springs. Snow, chain-law days and holiday traffic can easily stretch that drive. Mountain Star Transportation's car service from Denver to Aspen lets travelers skip the rental counter and leave the mountain driving to an experienced local chauffeur.

"Aspen is a long way from the airport, and in late November the weather on I-70 can change by the hour," said a Mountain Star Transportation spokesperson. "Our drivers make the run from Denver to Aspen all season. They track the roads and the forecast and get guests to the door, so the first thing they do in Aspen is relax, not deal with chains and a four-hour drive."

Denver Airport to Aspen transportation for families and groups

Most Aspen trips are run in a black current-generation Chevrolet Suburban Z71 with four-wheel drive and room for luggage and ski bags. Families and ski groups can book a black high-roof Mercedes-Benz Sprinter or Ford Transit passenger van, so a whole party can ride together on one schedule. The GMC Yukon XL and Cadillac Escalade ESV are also available on occasion. Every ride is private, with no shared stops, and pickups follow the traveler's flight so early or late arrivals are covered.

Guests staying slopeside can book the same service to the base village through the company's Denver to Snowmass car service. Return trips work the same way: car service from Aspen to Denver can be timed to hotel checkout and the departure flight out of DEN, which matters on the busy Sunday after Thanksgiving.

Tips for the Denver to Aspen trip this Thanksgiving

- Book early: Thanksgiving week and the Sunday after the holiday are among the busiest travel days between Denver and the mountains.
- Share your flight number so the pickup time can adjust to delays.
- Plan for a longer winter route. With Independence Pass closed for the season, allow extra time for the drive via Glenwood Springs.
- Aspen sits at about 7,900 feet. Drink water and take it easy on the first evening.
- Comparing options? Read the company's guide on the best way to get from Denver to Aspen before deciding.

Travelers can check availability and reserve Denver Airport to Aspen transportation on the book a Denver to Aspen car service page, or call dispatch at 720-234-2643, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.
