Denver to Beaver Creek Transportation Ready for Saturday Opening Day and Birds of Prey World Cup

Mountain Star Transportation offers private Denver to Beaver Creek transportation from DIA as Beaver Creek opens November 28 and hosts Birds of Prey World Cup races in December.

Denver, Colorado Nov 27, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - With Beaver Creek Resort set to open for the 2026/27 ski season on Saturday, November 28, and the Birds of Prey World Cup races arriving the following week, Mountain Star Transportation is reminding skiers, race fans and holiday visitors that private Denver to Beaver Creek transportation can be reserved ahead for a door-to-door ride from Denver International Airport (DIA) to Beaver Creek Village, Bachelor Gulch, Arrowhead and Avon.

Beaver Creek originally planned to open on Wednesday, November 25, but moved Opening Day to Saturday after warm early-November temperatures at the mountain's lowest elevations slowed snowmaking, according to the resort and local news reports. Village events for Thanksgiving week are going ahead as planned. Just days later, the International Ski and Snowboard Federation (FIS) confirmed the snow control for the Birds of Prey men's World Cup races, scheduled for December 3–6, with the women's races planned for December 11–13. Together, the opening and the races make the next three weekends some of the busiest arrival days of the early season for travelers flying into Denver and heading to the Vail Valley.

The drive from DEN to Beaver Creek covers roughly 120 miles on I-70 through the Eisenhower-Johnson Memorial Tunnel and over Vail Pass. Early-season storms, chain-law days and weekend ski traffic can turn the trip into a long afternoon behind the wheel. Mountain Star Transportation's car service from Denver to Beaver Creek lets visitors skip the rental counter and the mountain driving and ride with an experienced local chauffeur instead.

"Opening Day and Birds of Prey bring a lot of people to Beaver Creek in a short window, and many of them land at DIA the same morning," said a Mountain Star Transportation spokesperson. "Our drivers run the Denver to Beaver Creek route all winter. They watch the forecast and the I-70 conditions, track each flight and get guests to their lodge so they can be on the hill or at the race finish area instead of stuck in traffic."

Private Denver Airport to Beaver Creek transportation for families and groups

Most rides to Beaver Creek are run in a black current-generation Chevrolet Suburban Z71 with four-wheel drive and room for luggage, skis and boot bags. Families, ski teams and groups of race fans can book a black high-roof Mercedes-Benz Sprinter or Ford Transit passenger van so everyone travels together on one schedule, and the GMC Yukon XL and Cadillac Escalade ESV are available on occasion. Details on each vehicle are on the company's ski resort transportation fleet page. Every trip is a private transfer with no shared stops, and pickups follow the traveler's flight, so late-night and early-morning arrivals are covered 24 hours a day.

The return trip works the same way. Beaver Creek to Denver Airport transportation can be timed to lodge checkout and the departure flight out of DEN, which helps on busy Sundays after race weekends. Travelers comparing the drive from Denver to Beaver Creek with shuttles or a rental car can also read the company's update on Denver Airport to Beaver Creek opening week travel.

Tips for the trip from Denver to Beaver Creek this season

- Book early: Opening weekend and the Birds of Prey race weekends in early December are expected to be busy in the Vail Valley.
- Share your flight number so the pickup time adjusts to delays at DIA.
- Allow extra time on snowy days. Colorado's traction and chain laws on I-70 can slow traffic over Vail Pass.
- Resort dates, hours and race schedules are subject to change, so check the official Beaver Creek and Birds of Prey updates before you travel.

Travelers can check availability and reserve private transportation from Denver to Beaver Creek online through the book Denver Airport to Beaver Creek transportation page, or call dispatch at 720-234-2643, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

About Mountain Star Transportation

Mountain Star Transportation LLC is a Denver-based private car service founded in 2011 that provides private transportation from Denver International Airport to Colorado ski resorts, including Beaver Creek, Vail, Breckenridge, Keystone, Aspen, Snowmass, Steamboat Springs and Winter Park. The company operates 24/7 and is licensed by the Colorado Public Utilities Commission (PUC LL-01989).

Media Contact

Mountain Star Transportation

@mountaincars.com

720-234-2643

4380 S Monaco St

https://mountaincars.com/

Source : Mountain Star Transportation

See on IssueWire