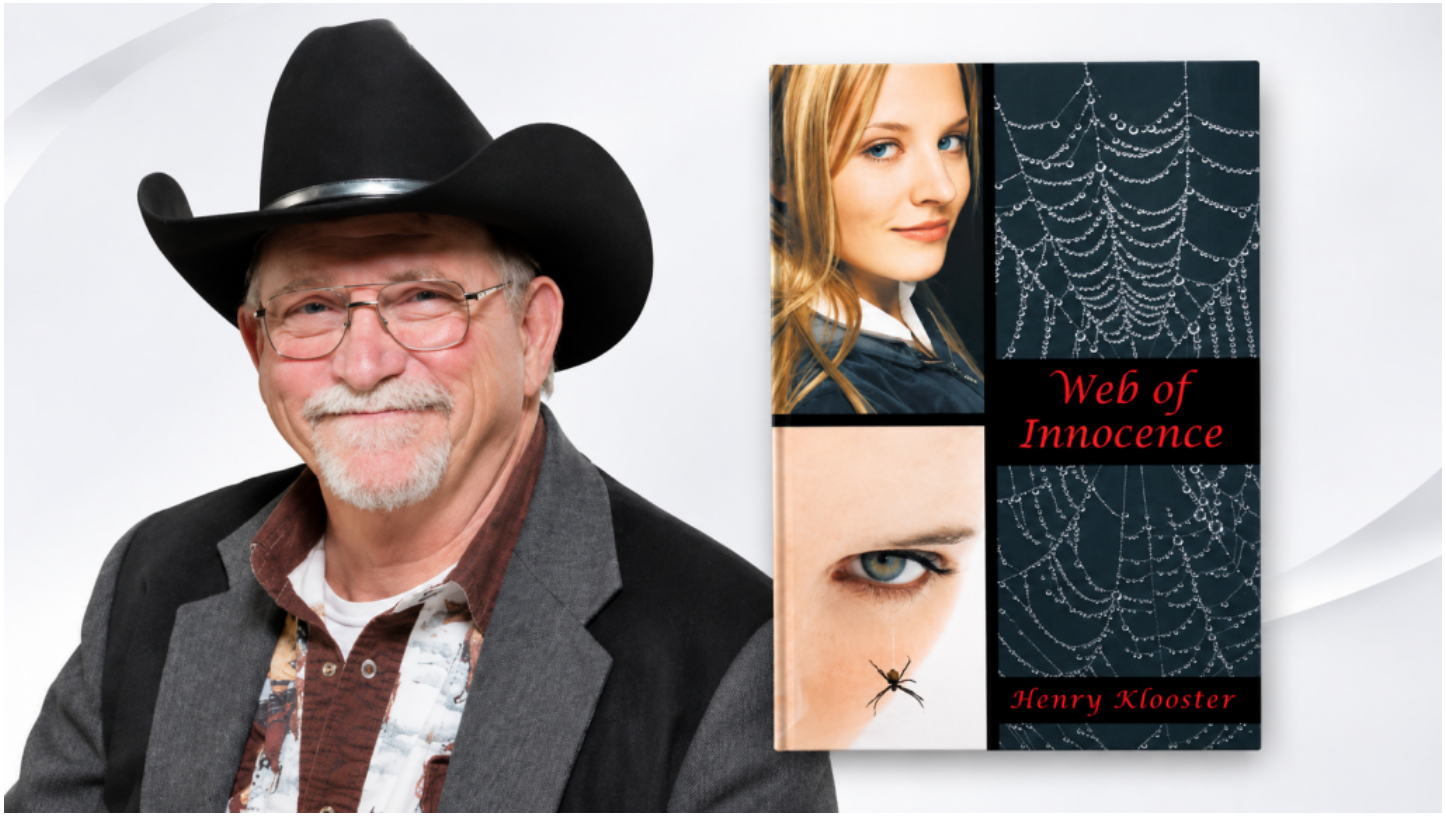
Henry Klooster Introduces a Gripping Story of Justice and Betrayal in Web of Innocence

A legal thriller follows an 18-year-old accused of murder as a young attorney uncovers a possible web of revenge, corruption, and hidden motives



Leduc, Alberta Nov 28, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Henry Klooster presents Web of Innocence, a legal thriller centered on a young man fighting to prove his innocence after being accused of a murder he did not commit. Set against a backdrop of personal conflicts, questionable loyalties, and concealed agendas, the novel explores how the pursuit of truth can become complicated when powerful individuals have something to hide.

The story follows 18-year-old Will Hulst, who was raised in a strictly religious home and suddenly finds himself facing a murder accusation. Barb Prescott, a young attorney assigned to defend him, believes in his innocence and begins investigating the circumstances surrounding the case. Her efforts lead her toward a possible cover-up involving a local police chief driven by an old vow of revenge and a prominent businessman determined to protect an illegitimate empire.

As Barb works to uncover the truth, her relationship with a young deputy threatens to complicate her professional responsibilities and put her career at risk. Meanwhile, Will's hopes may depend on Crystal Simpson, an ex-girlfriend he once shunned and embarrassed, who has mysteriously disappeared. Her whereabouts and possible connection to the case add another layer of uncertainty to an already complicated investigation.

Through its interconnected characters and unfolding revelations, Web of Innocence examines themes of justice, betrayal, revenge, faith, forgiveness, and personal accountability. The story places its characters in situations where past decisions and hidden motivations have consequences, challenging their understanding of right and wrong. With unexpected developments and a surprising conclusion, the novel invites readers to consider how easily appearances can obscure the truth.

Henry Klooster brings a varied professional background to his writing. Born in Rocky Mountain House, Alberta, to Dutch immigrant parents who survived the Holocaust, he spent much of his life in Alberta. His experience includes business ownership, safety and security coordination, and private investigation. He has also contributed to local newsletters and regional newspapers, with poetry appearing in Canadian anthologies. His writing contributions titled Living Grace, ran for two years.

Furthermore, Klooster is also working toward the release of his second novel, Come the Dawn, tentatively scheduled for May 2027. Based on his father's World War II and Holocaust diaries, the forthcoming book draws on a deeply personal family history.

The author lives in Leduc, Alberta, where he remains active in his local church.

Web of Innocence is intended for readers interested in legal thrillers, crime fiction, and suspenseful stories involving complex investigations and questions of justice. Readers can find the book on Amazon here.

Media Contact

Wells Hamilton Literary Consultants LLC

@wellshamilton.com

3027270319

800 N KING ST. WILMINGTON, DE 19801

http://wellshamilton.com

Source : Wells Hamilton Literary Consultants LLC

See on IssueWire