

Inspired By A Well-Known Entrepreneur, a Silicon Valley Drop-Out Goes All In.

In November 2018, GiftedIn24 will formally hit the market with the first national program for same delivery of gift baskets.

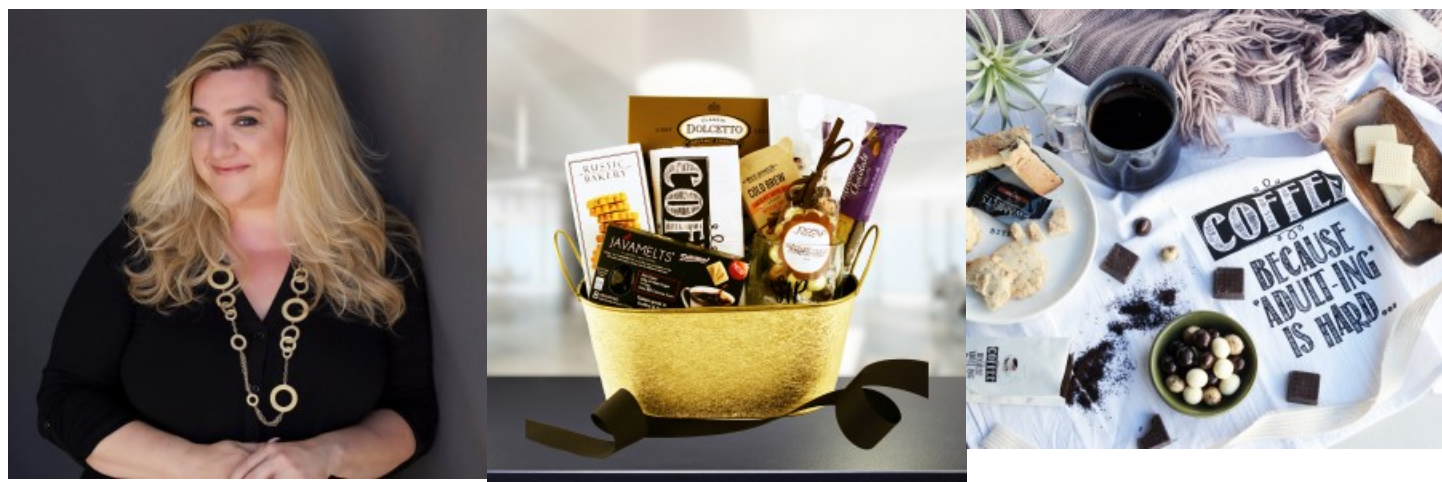

Phoenix, Oct 27, 2018 (Issuewire.com) - Inspired by entrepreneur, Gary Vaynerchuk, Debbie Quintana made the decision to quit thinking about doing something big and just do it. "I've been listen to Gary V. for years and if you follow him, he has zero tolerance for whining and lack of confidence. I made well informed decisions sprinkled with a moderate risk tolerance and now, its go time. I honestly can't believe I'm doing this but I am all in."

After getting laid off from her corporate Silicon Valley job, Quintana decided to listen to the "Gary V voice in my head and I never went back to corporate." For the last several years, she's been building the concept that is now called, GiftedIn24. A company that is going to disrupt the very peaceful $18 billion dollar gift basket industry.

"Search on the internet and not even Amazon can do it. Any company that promises the delivery of a gift basket same day isn't going to do it the way we can," explained Quintana. "Our business model is simple - quality, modern gifts created by local certified gift designers." No old school wicker baskets, no overnight charges, no florists, no broken delivery promises or settling for a fruit bouquet. Shoppers are supporting local business owners aka as the members of The Gift Basket Association, a company Quintana founded in 2009.

"I'm constantly thinking about what Gary V. would say and it's driving my decision making and confidence. In all honesty, I probably wouldn't have been so bold to go this far if it wasn't for him. I know it sounds stalky but everyone needs to have someone they truly believe in and he's my guy. He has a lifelong dream to own the Jets, I have a lifelong dream to be able to afford to hire him. Until then, I'll keep selling gift baskets."
