

How On-Demand Uber Clone Industry Is Becoming a Part of Our Day to Day Life?

Miami, Jan 29, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - Starting from the laundry in the morning to having dinner in the night, everything is being outsourced to on-demand firms. Many entrepreneurs are taking the on-demand business in their hand. To reduce the overall cost they resort to app clone scripts to create a customizable app for their business. In such a way clone industry is indirectly becoming a part of our daily lives.

How this was possible?

Smartphone penetration across the world has increased multifold in the last 10 years. No one predicted such growth. With just 16% of the total population using the internet in 2005 to 48% of the total population using the internet in 2018, the internet penetration has increased by 4 times keeping in mind the increase in population in that period. It all started with using smartphones for entertainment apart from using it for communication. After the advent of faster and affordable internet, people started using smartphones for other purposes like chatting, making a video call, watching movies and web series to name a few.

Another important reason for the popularity of on-demand apps are the millennials. No one can disagree that millennials are highly productive than any other people. They spend most of their time working and have little or no time for other activities. To balance work and life they have to be highly productive. With a deep smartphone, internet penetration, millennials embrace these technologies to be more productive.

Millennials were able to easily adapt to the changing technology so, many on-demand apps mainly aiming to increase the productivity of the people have started to emerge. 60% of the on-demand consumers are millennials. On-demand businesses offer the people :

- To avoid unnecessary bureaucracy
- To save time
- Get whatever, whenever they need
- Reduce unnecessary costs

Some popular on-demand businesses

Ride handling: Companies like Uber, Lyft, and Ola are some of the popular taxi apps operating across the world. They enable the riders to book cabs anywhere, anytime and provide a lot of other features.

Food delivery: This is similar to ride handling firms. Customers can order foods from a range of restaurants. Companies also give a lot of discounts and offers. Foodpanda, swiggy, Uber eats are into this business.

Healthcare: Go2Nurse, Myremedy are some US-based companies on health care app business. They help patients connect with the doctors. In-house treatment is made possible because of these apps. This business has a lot of potentials.

Tow truck: In case your vehicle broke down in the middle of the road, just book a tow truck with a tap on the phone. This business is available only in a few places

Laundry: No time to wash your clothes? No worries. Many on-demand laundry services are available. They pick up the clothes from you, wash it and give it to the customers on time.

Why businesses prefer app clone scripts?

Entrepreneurs starting their own on-demand businesses have the responsibility of creating sophisticated mobile applications. Uber invested lakhs of dollars to create an app from scratch. They had a lot of investors behind them. Everyone cannot expect such external funding also, creating apps from scratch can cost $20,000 to $40,000. So, entrepreneurs having budget constraints can use app clone scripts. App clone scripts can cost a maximum of $5,000.

Uber app clone script is a popular clone among others. App clone scripts are nothing but a mirror image of the original app. They have the same features, in some cases additional features than that of the original app. Customization and scalability are the main reason why app clone is preferred.
