If you can describe what a true artist should be like, then Fabio Baroncelli stands as an example. This software engineer found his calling for music and without a second thought dived into it with his heart and soul. Taking his experiences and travels into a count, Fabio's every track and music video is presented with abstract art which makes it the more interesting. The artist is from the Netherlands and wants to share with the world his sense of music through his latest music video 'Be my escape'. Using his label FabLab, he experiments with various genres which give him the enhanced knowledge of appropriate synchronisation of melodies.

This multi-instrumentalist plays with symphonies in ways many established artist can't think of. His video 'Be my escape' shows his artistic creativity at its best. The music video has abstract art, contemporary dance moves and various instrumental symphonies imbibed into it. The minimalistic lyricism allows the listeners and watches to escape into the abstract world that Fabio Baroncelli created with his music. He combines multiple genres such as dance, techno and trap and his music video is 'Be my escape' is a fusion of all three. The video kicks off with the label name followed by a glass wall where contemporary dance moves are shown as a means of escapism. The sudden change in colours shows the change in the mood of the video. The audience will get transported into the fantasy world that Fabio Baroncelli has built for them.

Throughout the music video, you will hear phrases like 'be my escape, I want to run away'. It shows the artist's desire to leave this harsh reality and lose himself into someone else. The black and white colours throughout the video show the memory lane of an individual. Many abstract shapes and forms can be seen in the video which is subjective and can be interpreted differently. Fabio Baroncelli in video clip 'Be my escape' allows the audience to run wild with their creativity.
