To stay up to date in his field, Michael remains a professional member of the American Association of Nurse Practitioners and the California Association for Nurse Practitioners.

Family Nurse Practitioners, in particular, are trained to work with both children and adults, most often in the context of a family practice or clinical setting. FNP's work with patients on maintaining health and wellness over the long term with a particular focus on preventative care. Many FNP's also choose to work in underserved populations and communities. An FNP may work under the direct supervision of a physician. More and more states, however, are allowing FNP's to work independently due to an extreme lack of doctors, particularly in the area of family practice.

Michael attributes his professional success to his willingness to listen, to understand and the ability to step back and process. When not working he enjoys poetry.
