New York, Feb 20, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - Cathleen Doane-Wilson, MD, obtained her medical degree in 1980 from the College of Medicine at the University of Vermont in Burlington. She completed her residency at the University of Hawaii, Kapiolani—Children's Medical Center, in Honolulu, Hawaii, in 1984.

Dr. Doane-Wilson has been practicing for more than thirty years. In addition to having a license to practice medicine in Virginia and Delaware, she is also Board Certified by the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology, though she has retired from Obstetrics and focuses her practice in Gynecology. Additionally, she is qualified in and performs robotic-assisted gynecologic surgery.

Gynecologists are dedicated to the care of women and women's health throughout their lifespan. The combined discipline of obstetrics and gynecology requires extensive study and understanding of reproductive physiology, including the physiologic, social, cultural, environmental, and genetic factors that influence disease in women. It involves the integration of medical and surgical care of women treating various disease entities during a woman's life. The study and understanding of the reproductive physiology of women give obstetricians and gynecologists a unique perspective in addressing gender-specific health care issues. Preventative counseling and health education are essential and integral parts of the practice of obstetricians and gynecologists as they advance the individual and community-based health of women of all ages.
