In addition to his clinical training, he performed NIH-funded research for 3 years and published multiple journal articles, book chapters, and has presented at national meetings. He has a particular interest in head and neck surgery and has extensive training with transoral laser techniques.

Dr. Nason has also learned the most state-of-the-art techniques encompassing ear, voice/larynx, endocrine, salivary gland (including sialendoscopy), and sinonasal disorders including image-guided sinus surgery and balloon sinuplasty. He is able to give his patients the most up-to-date medical advice because he continues learning and is dedicated to lifelong education.

Dr. Nason earned his medical degree from the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, Texas, then continued his studies with an internship in general surgery at Washington University in Saint Louis. Then, Dr. Nason undertook a residency in Otolaryngology and Head & Neck Surgery at Washington University in Saint Louis and furthered his education by participating in a fellowship in Pediatric Otolaryngology at the Rady Children's Hospital with UCSD in San Diego, California.

Otolaryngology is a medical specialty focused on the ears, nose, and throat. It is also called otolaryngology-head and neck surgery because specialists are trained in both medicine and surgery. An otolaryngologist is often called an ear, nose, and throat doctor, or an ENT for short. This medical specialty dates back to the 19th century when doctors recognized that the head and neck contained a series of interconnected systems. They developed techniques and tools for examining and treating problems of the head and neck, eventually forming a medical specialty.

Dr. Nason has earned many honors and awards throughout his career for his work, including the Michael Paparella Research Award. He maintains a professional membership in the Alpha Omega Alpha Medical Honor Society and is able to give his patients the best possible care. His research has been published in many prestigious medical journals and he is able to provide his patients with the highest standard of care.
