However, recently a major problem regarding migration visa to the USA has troubled the individuals who wanted to go there for job purpose or for experiencing a grand tour story. Donald Trump has announced that the immigration, as well as, a border wall will become the centerpiece of the 2020 re-election campaign. However, the order signed by Trump says that it will ban the entire refugee admission system at least for 120 days.

Moreover, people from some major Muslim countries are forbidden to enter the US for 90 days. Countries including Iran, Libya, Iraq, Somalia, Syria, Sudan, and Yemen are therefore facing trouble in case of issuing US visa. A 16-years old Syrian refugee, who was supposed to get treatment from the experts of the US, has been refused to issue her visa. This order has taken the form of a legal challenge. Over thousands of Americans have turned up and protested outside the courthouses and airports to showcase their solidarity with Muslims and other migrants.

According to the current report, almost 15,384 of visa applications are turned down under the travel ban. These immigration visas involve those individuals who want to live in the USA. The data includes 21,645 non-immigrant visas for the individuals who wish to reside temporarily in the USA. The State Department spokesperson has noted that if an applicant is "otherwise eligible for a visa and does not qualify for an exception," the consular officers can also grant waivers "on a case by case basis" if the individual is able to prove that "denying entry during the suspension period would cause undue hardship; his or her entry would not pose a threat to national security or public safety of the United States, and his or her entry would be in the national interest."

However, the data implies the fact that in January 2019 around 2,673 applicants had been noticed to clear for the waivers under this criterion and "many already have received their visas".
