Week Plan introduces the OKR Module for setting up and tracking the objective Key Result of an organization.

Sydney, Feb 12, 2019 (IssueWire.com) - Week Plan has announced the OKR module that is packed with all the essential features required to set up and track the OKR of an organization.

OKR Software has the ability to help organizations get their most important goals. They are used by almost all the top organizations of the world like Google, LinkedIn, and Twitter, etc. Week Plan understands the importance of this feature that's why they make this remarkable feature a part of their software.

The OKR methodology of Week Plan allows the organization to set up all the objectives which they want to achieve for each month, quarter or year. They are basically short and inspiring descriptions regarding what you want to achieve. You can easily set specific key results along with each of your objective without any limitations.

The OKR module of Week Plan also allows users to include the high impact tasks with their objectives because the Week Plan strongly believes that an objective is incomplete without having a high impact task associated with it. You can add multiple high impact tasks with all your objectives.

Without measuring the success of your OKR, you cannot recognize the impact of OKR on your business. Week Plan OKR module is not only restricted to create OKR's but also allows you to track them as well by including the start and end values among them. You can include relative metrics with every key result so that you can track the progress of every individual objective.

The key reason for having an OKR feature in their tool is to provide users with a successful framework that can boost the overall effectiveness of a team. They play a major role in growing an organization on the basis of a result-oriented process.
