

Digital Investigations: The Truth Is Out There

Mark Williamson and Don Macfarlane, are bringing considerable knowledge and experience via “Macfarlane Williamson” to provide expertise, support with digital investigations

New York City, Mar 13, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - Mark Williamson and Don Macfarlane, formerly of Hanzo Limited, are bringing their considerable industry knowledge and experience to a new consultancy organisation “Macfarlane Williamson” dedicated to providing expertise, support and hands-on help with digital investigations

People and organisations leave digital footprints: online, on social media, in databases, in digital objects. By collecting this data, aggregating and analysing it using statistics and machine learning your business can make better decisions

Dr Don Macfarlane brings 20 years legal experience and Mark Williamson brings more than 30 years of technological entrepreneurship. Both were key members of the team behind the investigations product at Hanzo. Working with customers and industry leaders they recognised the need for business to develop a multifaceted approach to digital investigations and decided to found Macfarlane Williamson in order to use their considerable expertise and experience to help customers make investigations automated, repeatable, consistent with legally defensible court ready outputs.

James Donnelly of Data Perfect says "Working with Mark and Don has allowed our international customers to use digital data sources including web, social media and unstructured data sources to establish facts and provide an ROI in dealing with their own customers."
