

Dream Pop Synchronization is being Depicted Ever So Beautifully in Dr. Buzzworm's Song 'Seattle'

Dr. Buzzworm has created an ethereal dramatic sequence in his latest release 'Seattle', an unparalleled territory of incredible lyrical saga and sound disposition.

Los Angeles, Mar 13, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - The subjective annotations in music are a matter of creative glory. When alternative rock and psychedelia come together in harmony, the outcome is boisterous. Los Angeles based singer/songwriter Dr. Buzzworm has captured the right essence of this over-lapping genre styles and come out with verses of dream pop in his versatile track list. His newest release 'Seattle' is a distinct style incorporating milestone insertions in the limitless boundaries of collective music. From the melodious terms to its picturesque illustration of a terminal musical extravaganza, 'Seattle' makes the perfect melody on our playlists for a whole lot of reasons, both personal and subjective.

Robert Tapert who goes by his stage-name Dr. Buzzworm has deliberately made his songs pop through the crevices of experimental rock. Having had experiences in a band with The Buzzworms, he has imbibed differential experiences and styles that made him put together his own sound of the years of constructive and creative manipulations. Going solo has made him explore his flairs as an artist in the opinionated spectrum of outspokenness through music. He has worked with various labels and production houses, an exposure that added to his already existing musical wisdom. A patron and tribute to Seattle, his songs brims with the city's essence in its weather, gloomy entrails and the whole emotional impact on a day that doesn't shine.

Inspiration-driven and focused, 'Seattle' definitely allows its audience to paint their personal versions of interpretations. Some of his other songs like 'Never' or 'Ice Water in Hell' all imbibe beautiful flavors of the things that we yearn and find solace in. Be a part of this incredible nurturer of music by following Dr. Buzzworm on Spotify and Facebook.
