He likes to experiment with many genres, but his favorite one is hip hop. He is also planning a few collaborations with other talented artists in the hip hop genre.

In this exclusive interview, Sung Eun Choi talks about his journey as a musician so far, latest tracks and upcoming projects:

Interviewer: What inspired you to choose music as a career?

Sung Eun Choi: I liked music since I was young. I like Michael Jackson, Mariah Carey, and I have grown up my dream by watching hip-hop music such as 2PAC Puff Daddy. I thought I should do music myself, not content to listen to it at any moment. Singing on a great stage and breathing with the audience seemed cool.

Interviewer: Tell us something about your journey in the music industry so far?

Sung Eun Choi: From hip-hop music to electronic new age, he has been playing diverse music and has taken on new challenges, not limited to genre, and is a musician who can write lyrics and compose by himself, which is not uncommon in the pop world, and has contributed to the music industry.

Interviewer: What is the inspiration behind your debut track let me Stop?

Sung Eun Choi: I was inspired by many entertainers and aspiring people who broke up with me while dancing with music.

Interviewer: Apart from Hip Hop, what other genres of music you're interested in?

Sung Eun Choi: New Age

Interviewer: What can the audience expect from your track SpringWaltz?

Sung Eun Choi: You can expect to indulge in sad love, heartbreaking sorrow, and deep thought

Interviewer: Tell us something about your upcoming projects?

Sung Eun Choi: I want to do various music regardless of genre, and I want to do music at its basic center that gives joy to audiences who deliver the energy of various moods such as bright, exciting, cheerful and sad.
