Spokane, Dec 31, 1969 (Issuewire.com) - With mainstream music mostly focusing on the top genre like hip-hop, blues, pop, metal people often tend to ignore the less knowledgeable genres like the trap, trance, synth, reggae and much more. However the new artist Ese Lokote is on his way to get the world familiarised with these lesser known genres through his track 'Itchy Hands'. The tracks hold up to the audience the real issues that an individual have to come across every day in their life. Ese Lokote who is also known as Daniel A. Brown is not only a hip-hop artist but composes music on trap too. He also owns his own production house labelled as M.L.G Ent.

While composing the track 'Itchy Hands', this Washington rapper took the help of Authentic who is otherwise known as Jay Doe. The artist Ese Lokote wanted to convey several messages through his compositions to his fans and he did so with his track 'Itchy Hands'. Unlike most hip-hop tracks that have been trending these days dealing with money and women, 'Itchy Hands' emphasises on how money is essential for survival. It can easily be realised that the artist had to overcome multiple hardships while focusing on his music career. Hailing from the United States Ese Lokote describes the everyday realities he had to go through in his life.

Ese Lokote produced the track 'Itchy Hands' taking assistance from Speaker Bangerz. Compared to some of the professional artist in the industry it can easily be said that the artist can give them a run for their money. The level of intensity varies as the track starts. With each new verse, the compelling quality of the song enhances. The lyricism along with the soundscape of the track matches perfectly making it one of the top trending songs of all time.
