

Nature Lover Releases New Photo Book on Science and Literature

Writer launches second of her children's book series

Pittsburg, May 29, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - Hanging Out with Animals II by Cheryl Batavia is a wonderful nature-themed poetry collection with colourful photographs that she has delicately curated from online sources. Featuring wild animals from Florida which are each carefully researched, the author not only educates readers but entertains them as well while adding personal touches on the pages with her own encounters with the lovely creatures. It is a vibrant blend of an artsy educational tool and factual literature that aims to cultivate young minds to become a new generation of environmental advocates.

Batavia feels this book is her legacy as a retired teacher. Focusing more on children, she wants to inspire more readers to protect the animals and preserve their habitats. "I believe that happiness in life comes from appreciating what you have, not from focusing on what you wish you had. The world around us and the animals in it are a wonderful gift of nature to be appreciated and enjoyed," shares the author.

A World to Discover

All the poems in this book are inspired by my own real-life experiences here in Florida. All of these wonderful animals, and many others, live here. Wherever you live, a lot of interesting animals live near you. There is a whole wide world to explore: beaches, mountains, zoos, parks, or your own backyard. So get out there and meet some animals for yourself! Have a wonderful time exploring the world around you, and observe animals whenever you go. Take a camera along to record and share your adventures. If you are curious about the animals you meet, go online to learn more about them. You may be surprised to discover that some animals living near you are endangered. You can find out about ways to protect animals and their habitat. Always observe animals safely. Have fun!
