

LeoList Announces A Change In Ownership

The Largest Classified Site In Canada Plans It's Expansion

Vancouver, Jun 27, 2019 (IssueWire.com) - Things are changing at LeoList - the largest adult classified site in Canada. The company has been sold, and a new leadership team assembled. With this change, LeoList will continue to build out their service, improve the experience for all of LeoList's users and members, and strive to be the #1 classified site across Canada.

Following a series of difficulties with their payment processor, LeoList announced a change of ownership on a blog post and a series of community-focused initiatives.

According to LeoList's announcement, the new initiatives will take many forms, including --

- A new blog to improve communication between the executive team and LeoList's users
- Substantial quarterly donations to organizations
- A further-refined and improved customer service process
- A Community Board comprised of advertisers
- A relaunch and rebrand of LeoList
- New features, including a LeoGallery, improved private chat and ad statistics
- Focus on third-party service providers that recognize the importance of privacy in today's world
- Providers such as ProtonMail
- New partnerships with payment providers

Since the announcement was made, LeoList has re-established its credit card processor and enabled cryptocurrency and Flexepin payments on its platform.

You can read more about LeoList on their website, keep up with the LeoList chatter on Twitter, or read a blog post, which further explains the service here.
