

Silicon Valley International Invention Festival Exposition is coming back in 2020.

After the success of their first expo, SVIFF is coming back in 2020.

Santa Clara, Jul 12, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - The World Intellectual Property Organization along with the Swiss Consulate General of San Francisco Hosted the Silicon Valley International Invention Festival Exposition - The Silicon Valley International Invention Festival Exposition was held Monday, June 24th to Wednesday, June 26th, 2019 from 10:00 AM to 5:00 PM. Innovators, ground-breakers, investors, and visionaries all attended the Santa Clara Convention Center to learn from the most influential pioneers in leading industries as well as to broaden their network.

Hosted by the International Federation of Inventors Association (IFIA) and organized by PALEXPO SA, 200 new inventions and products from 400 exhibitors from 25 countries were showcased. Among those who spoke at the event for more than 2,500 visitors were Santa Clara Mayor, Lisa Gillmor, Consul General a.i. of Switzerland, Thomas Schneider and the Executive Director United Inventors Association of America, John Calvert. With 70% of attendees representing companies and universities, the 30% of private inventors and researchers were able to get in touch with manufacturers, financial backers, commercial agents, and promoters to distribute their invention worldwide. This event allowed for those with an invention ready to be commercialized to receive recognition among field experts as well as media coverage by journalists, the radio and TV reporters.

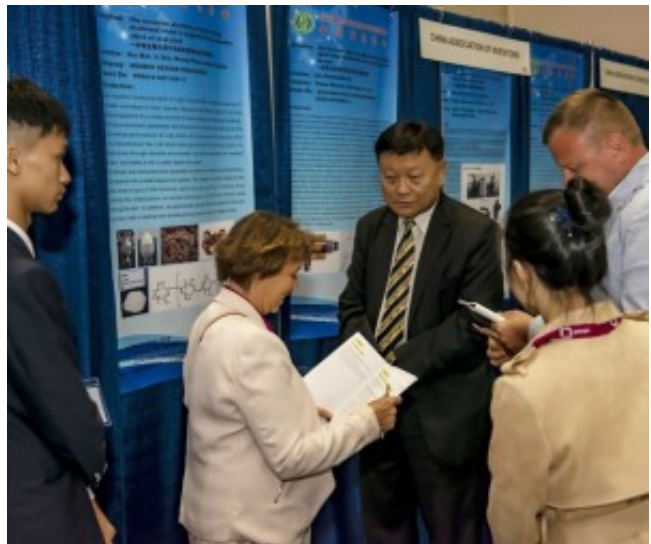

This event attracted a large audience and was supported by the World Intellectual Property Organization, the Swiss Consulate General of San Francisco, and the City and the University of Santa Clara.

Join us for next year's event from June 23rd to the 25th if you are interested in displaying your invention, meeting experts and influential leaders in the industry, to publicize and turn your investments to profit, and win special awards of high-ranking international organizations.
