Orlando, Aug 18, 2019 (IssueWire.com) - Robert J. Smith Productions to add Functional Movement Coach, Madison Doubroff to its health and fitness documentary, Exercise Me. The film includes household names such as the Detroit Tigers, Bowflex, BeachBody and Gold's Gym.

After filming Undersize Me in which Robert Smith lost an amazing 78-pounds in a six-month weight loss challenge that was featured on The CW Network, he was sidelined with a spinal injury. The injury left Smith unable to walk without the use of two canes. After a successful spine surgery at The Mayo Clinic, Smith's physical rehabilitation has been a long and arduous process. Doubroff has been called in to speed up that process.

Doubroff's functional rehab, fitness & reconditioning programs are designed to retrain an individual's fundamental posture and movement patterns, with the purpose of realigning and rebalancing the entire body while optimizing athletic movements.

Robert J. Smith Productions is an Internet Movie Database (IMDb) Top 5,000 Company which increases profits for businesses across the United States.
