Celina, Sep 17, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - Roofing contractor Burton Hughes, from New View Roofing, warns homeowners who didn't get roof inspections after the spring hailstorms that they could expect leaks this fall.

Homeowners in the area who've made it through summer without leaks may not be safe going forward.

“We see it all the time. Homeowners don’t get a roof inspection after hailstorms and assume everything is fine with their roof,” says Burton Hughes. “Summer is fairly dry in Texas so you may not notice roof damage or leaks. Then fall comes around, and homeowners are puzzled they have leaks.”

Burton Hughes and New View Roofing serve families all over the DFW Metroplex for all of their roofing needs including roof repair, roof replacement and emergency tarping

Hughes recommends that once homeowners discover a leak, immediately contain it with a bucket or something similar. You want to ensure the water damage doesn’t spread to other areas of your home. Move valuables away from the leak and cover remaining items with a tarp.

Contact a roofing professional immediately for a roof inspection to uncover the cause of the leak and to provide emergency repairs. Leaks never get better with time so it’s important to move quickly.

Homeowners can get a free roof inspection, and professional services to address any of their Celina roofing needs. Visit roofrepairhq.com to request an inspection.

New View Roofing is a veteran-owned roofing company, with a BBB A+ rating, hundreds of 5-star reviews and a GAF Master Elite Certification. Burton and New View serve the DFW Metroplex providing full-scale residential and commercial roofing systems from offices in McKinney, TX, Plano, TX, and The Colony, TX.
