

The Ripperologist by Tony Williams

Jack the Ripper

The Ripperologist

Tony Williams

South Wales, Sep 18, 2019 (IssueWire.com) - When Tony Williams from Swansea discovered by accident, that he was the direct descendant of Jack the Ripper, it sent shockwaves through not only his family but also the historical and medical Community.

He gave for the very first time a consistent and plausible explanation for every aspect of the crime. He even discovered what he is convinced is the murder weapon.

Tony has solved the crime of the millennium...what he didn't realize and had never heard of was a group of people who call themselves "The Ripperologists". They relied on the case never being solved, unless it was done by one of their own. They sent Tony a list of questions...which of course he answered.

Tony also has a list of evidence (example).

The Knife:

Doctor Thomas Bond, a pathologist who examined the body of Mary Kelly, said the Ripper had used the same six-inch knife in all the murders. He wrote: 'It was a strange knife, at least six inches long, very sharp, pointed at the top and about an inch in width. A surgeon's knife. But I think it was with no doubt a straight knife.' This is the knife that fits the description that Tony held in his hand at the National Library of Wales.

The 1888 Diary:

John Williams' diary held in the National Library has most of its pages removed: all his other diaries are intact.

Three Glass Slides:

The smears on the glass slides have been tested and are confirmed as being matter from the uterus. Reproductive organs were removed from the victims, the uterus was removed from Annie Chapman and Catherine Eddowes had her left kidney and womb removed.

Tony decided to write a book, a psychological thriller, about a ripperologist who would do anything to stop the crime being solved. Bringing the reader into a world of intrigue and terror.

The Ripperologist by Tony Williams is a fictionalized account based on a true story. It is available on Amazon paperback, Kindle and Audio.
