Current market scenario in the pharma sector:

The Pharma market nowadays is dramatically changing due to new innovative research and demand for new therapeutics and new regulatory policies and requirements. There is an increasing demand for generic drugs from countries such as Russia, UK, USA, China and India in recent years and developing drugs for the rare disease has become increasingly mainstream.

According to an estimate performed in October 2017, the total market value of the top 20 rare disease non-oncology companies was about $315 billion and for rare disease oncology companies was about $193 billion.

For Active Pharmaceutical Ingredients (API), in terms of geographic regions, the market research and analysis estimate that France will be one of the major revenue contributors to the API market throughout the next four years.

And certain pharmaceutical companies are now focusing on developing new innovative therapeutics such as peptide therapeutics, Nucleic acid therapeutics and cell therapy. Specifically, a new field of research, Bioelectronics & Electroceuticals. All these innovative approaches will create a revolution in the pharma sector.
