

Neda Disney on the Positive Phil Podcast Show - Author of Planting Wolves

All of them are trying to find something about themselves, in themselves. The more they try, the harder it becomes for them to be who they really are inside.

PLANTING WOLVES

NEDA DISNEY

Los Angeles, Nov 8, 2019 (IssueWire.com) - A writer in a purgatory bar, an art-collecting housewife who time travels, a movie Production Assistant with stigmata, a codependent AA sponsor, a sex addict, a movie star with issues, a two-time liver transplant recipient and an abusive TV customer who gets what's coming to her. All connected to one another but completely and utterly alone.

Neda Disney studied painting and sculpture in California and New York. She has worked as a film and TV costumer and a writer, producer, and reporter for WNYC public radio shows RadioLab, Studio 365. She is currently writing another novel, learning to weld, playing tennis and revisiting forgotten childhood wonder with her eight-year-old daughter. She lives in the Los Angeles neighborhood of Los Feliz with her family.

Her upcoming book, Planting Wolves- Read on #Amazon

A surreal and darkly funny set of tales of West Coast strangers.

Reading Planting Wolves hurt. Different characters, different backgrounds, surroundings, you name it. All of them are trying to find something about themselves, in themselves. The more they try, the harder it becomes for them to be who they really are inside.

Neda Disney has lived in England, Los Angeles, and New York. She studied painting and sculpture and has worked in film, TV, and radio. She lives in Los Angeles with her family.
