NAZZ

Nazz was an American rock band formed in Philadelphia, PA, in early 1967 that included Stewkey Antoni, Thom Mooney, Todd Rundgren, and Carson Van Osten. Their influences were The Yardbirds, The Beatles. The Who, Cream, Small Faces, Moby Grape, and others. They are best known for their debut single "Open My Eyes" backed with "Hello It's Me".

The band had been performing for a short time at small clubs before they landed their first major live show In June '67 with the Doors at Philadelphia Town Hall.

Nazz released two records as a band and a third was released a year after they had broken up that included unreleased tracks along with some outtakes and rehearsal bits.
