

Jennifer Moore, BSN, RN, a Registered Nurse and Chief Quality Officer with Mat-Su Regional Medical Center

Get to know Registered Nurse and Chief Quality Officer Jennifer Moore, who serves patients in Palmer, Alaska.

New York City, Dec 20, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - With over 20 years of experience in her field, Jennifer is a registered nurse and chief quality officer who can be found on staff at Mat-Su Regional Medical Center in Palmer, Alaska.

Mat-Su Regional Medical Center is a 109-bed acute care hospital with a wide range of inpatient and outpatient care, diagnostic imaging, as well as emergency, medical, and surgical services. Owned by Community Health Systems, the hospital also offers services such as wound care, as well as performs robotic-assisted partial and total knee and total hip replacement procedures - among others.

After finishing high school at Crookston High School in Minnesota, Jennifer went on to earn her nursing degree from North Dakota State College of Science in 1998. She also holds an Associate's Degree in Nursing from North Hennepin Community College and a Bachelor of Science in Nursing degree from Arizona State University.

A member of the Golden Key National Honor Society and the National Association for Healthcare Quality, she earned the "Nurse of the Year" Award by AK March of Dimes in November of 2016.

A registered nurse (RN) is a nurse who has graduated from a nursing program and met the requirements outlined by a country, state, province or similar licensing body to obtain a nursing license. RNs fulfill a variety of job duties. In addition to their primary role in treating and caring for patients, their responsibilities also include educating patients and the public about a variety of medical conditions, as well as providing emotional support and advice to the families of their patients. Other RN job functions include performing diagnostic tests and analyzing results, operating medical equipment, administering medications, recording patients' symptoms and medical histories, and assisting with patient rehabilitation and follow-up.

The chief quality officer (CQO) in any organization is the manager responsible for monitoring the quality of the products or services provided. Many CQOs report directly to the chief executive officer and are usually members of the management team. In healthcare, both small hospitals and major health systems charge CQOs with helping to collect and report the data that demonstrates high-quality outcomes, which are needed for reimbursement and to attract patients.

Happily married, Jennifer enjoys spending time with her family, exploring the outdoors in the great state of Alaska, and camping when she is not working.

Learn More About Jennifer Moore:

Through her online profile, <https://todaysnurse.org/network/index.php?do=/4145104/info/>

Media Contact

Your Health Contact

clientservice@yourhealthcontact.com

Source : Jennifer Moore, BSN, RN

See on IssueWire