Making of a masterpiece, with Irish artist Dony Mac Manus

District of Columbia, Dec 10, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - Brad Fassbender, the founder of Guadalupe Roastery, believes he can help settle the trade war through a simple cup of coffee and the fine arts. Brad stats, "all the cultures of the world have agriculture as their basis for trade and culture. You need a strong foundation and roots to grow society. It all starts with family farms. Whether you are in the east or west, core values take shape in the family." He continues, "with the globalization of the marketplace, it is evident that there is a major clash between cultures and civilizations that could hurt a lot of people." To show this clash and defeat it, Brad needed to partner with an artist. This is where Irish artist Dony Mac Manus comes in with a sculpture called "the Fountain of Life."

Fassbender partnered with Mac Manus to put a film together around the creation of "The Fountain of Life" to be released on December 25, 2019. The trailer speaks for itself. Fassbender stats, "we all have a part to play in ending the trade war."

Fassbender is looking for more partners to take this conversation of coffee, the fine arts, and trade to the next level, in order to help get a trade deal done. Watch the trailer and follow them on FaceBook to stay connected.
