Floyd Mayweather's ex accuses him of stealing $3M in jewelry.

Bethel, Jan 27, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - Floyd Mayweather engagement ring is, without a doubt, one among the richest athletes within the world. And he not shy to point out it, his nickname is 'Money,' and his promotional company is known as 'TMT,' which is an acronym of 'The Money Team.'

He was ranked #1 within the Forbes highest-earning athletes, having earned a staggering $28million. And he earned that payday by fighting Irish UFC star Conor McGregor in Las Vegas. He has been on the Forbes highest-earning athlete list on several occasions.

With Floyd Mayweather Engagement Ring making that kind of cash, it's hard to believe when anyone accuses him of stealing. His former girlfriend, Shantel Jackson, has accused the five-time world champion of stealing jewelry worth $3 million.

According to The Blast, Jackson allegedly said that Floyd Mayweather Engagement Ring took a $2.4 million diamond ring. And $0.24 million diamond earrings (10 ct), a $ 30,844 Chanel watch, a $98,141 diamond bracelet. A $19,628 diamond heart necklace, and a $20,329 Louis Vuitton lock necklace. This is often on top of the reported $0.1million in luxury clothes, shoes, and purses that she accused the retired boxer of stealing.

Floyd and Jackson split back in 2014, and immediately after splitting, she accused Floyd of battering, blackmailing, imprisoning, and breach of privacy. She also alleged that Floyd held her at gunpoint and threatened to leak naked pics of her.
