

Richard Evans of Rich Money Models - Women should be Free From Violence and have Freedom To Express Themselves

Women should be Free From Violence and have Freedom To Express Themselves. Richard Evans, the founder of Rich Money Models, and his models fight against women violence and trafficking.

New York, New York City, Mar 28, 2021 (IssueWire.com) - Success as a modeling agency businessman does not make Richard Evans forget the equal rights of women, especially models who join Rich Money Models. The female models incorporated in Rich Money Models consist of various types of races from many countries in the world including several middle eastern models. Even though they are physically different, they have the same rights as all women in the world. Every woman wants to look beautiful naturally, free from violence and human trafficking. Unfortunately, in some parts of the world, many women still get discrimination and violence. Especially becoming a victim of human trafficking.

Recently, Richard Evans, the founder of Rich Money Models, announced that he has joined The Organization for Women's Rights on the ideology. The Organization for Women's Rights was established in 2003. The organization focuses on protecting women's human rights, including fighting against women and girls trafficking. The Organization for Women's Rights has also operated six safe houses for women survivors of violence. Richard Evans, CEO of Rich Money Models, explained that violence against women & girls being trafficked still occurs in America and all over the world... He added Rich Money Models has several middle east models and stands behind their rights as women, and stands up against the unfair treatment of women in those countries. Rich money models believe that women should be able to wear wakeup, take off their head covering and be beautiful, without fear of violence.
