

Writer's Wonderfully Written Winter Tale

'Tis a whimsical holiday story that would enkindle the flames of imagination that's flickering inside all of us.

Pittsburg, Feb 27, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - The Murphy and Conroy family are the center of Tanner's The Battle of Elm and 11th, an endearing and merry rhyming poem that is best for the holiday season but would entertain anyone anyway any time of the year. Aside from the two amiable families, this story also highlights the snowmen that each of the family has made, who, for some reason, ended up in a duel. Read and join the Murphy's and Conroy's, as they investigate what could have ignited the heated brawl between the frosty snowmen.

“This is the "IT" children's book of the holidays! It's fun, clever and poetic. All while teaching children a valuable life lesson encouraging kindness and value in humanity! Such a great read! I can't wait to gift this to friends and family for the holidays! I'll be patiently waiting for the sequel!!” says Candice, an Amazon customer.

Tanner lives in his hometown, Rockford, Illinois, with his wife and three children. He loves fiction, no matter the genre, and is a free-spirited man who takes pleasure in finding the absurdity in the humdrum cycle of life.

The Battle of Elm & 11th

A rhyming children's tale of roughly 2,650 words, in which friendly neighbors awake to find the snowmen they've made the previous day have apparently come to life and battled to their end in the street during the night, and the charming way one of their parents endeavors to explain things to the children.

Tanner Frankfort lives in his hometown of Rockford, Illinois with his wife Heather and their three children, Sam, Max, and Zoe. Adulthood has not stopped him from being and often behaving like a child, and he relishes every opportunity that allows him to play outside. He delights in finding the absurd in the otherwise mundane, and loves fiction in all of its forms.
