Empowering Young Girls around the world

New York City, Mar 6, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - Fears Girl on International Women's Day

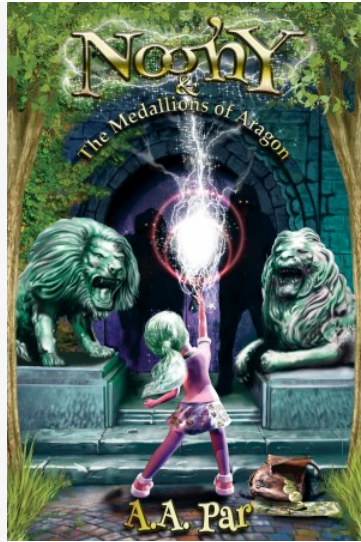

International Women's Day and 3 years following, a book inspired by "Fearless Girl" is now released. The iconic statue has been adapted into a new children's book series to inspire young girls globally.

The book series, "Noony & The Medallions of Aragon," was developed to continue the "Fearless Girl" message to girls internationally. This story includes STEM education, history, adventure, inclusion and diversity. "The best way to support our children is to inspire curiosity to follow their dreams without fear." The Princeton University Store immediately adopted the book and the City of Newark is considering the book for its summer reading program, along with two other school districts in New Jersey.

Beginning March 8th, for one week in honor of International Women's Day, proceeds from the book sale will be donated to Girls Inc. The book can be purchase on Amazon in print or e-book format, a special edition of the book is available on the company's website at www.noonybook.com. In celebration of International Women's Day, we would like to encourage readers to purchase "Noony & The Medallions of Aragon" and spread the spirit of "Fearless Girl."
