Flyfire

El Paso, Mar 16, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - E.J. Grym raising funds for the beginning of a sci-fi series of books that with the intent to make into a video game series on Kickstarter.

The "Haven 133" saga has been a literal dream of mine that started back in 2014, as I woke up in the middle of the night with a logo in mind and the characters racing through the desert in my mind. Each character has been given enough development and attention that it makes them feel genuine as they live in this brand new, yet eerily familiar world of the future known in the story as Neoterra.

Haven 133: Flyfire (HANA version) is the first entry in a series of books that tell the story of a woman named Syn Guillory, who lives in a society rebuilt after two failed attempts throughout the span of two decades. It is a story of mystery and intrigue, one where the answer to one question summons two more. A story of redemption after a crisis of mistaken identity that sets a chain of events in motion.

E.J. Grym seeks to self-publish the first trilogy of the series on Xlibris US.

Funding will also cover the production of limited merchandise, and enough publicity to give the book a decent advertising campaign.

The passion for this project is such that the author sees this book as a beginning to something big beyond the pages.

Please join us by backing this project, aiding its development and publishing!
