Specializing in glaucoma, she participates in leading research within the field. She is also affiliated with several hospitals and medical centers in the local area, including University Hospital and Newark Beth Israel Medical Center.

A 2012 graduate of the Meharry Medical College School of Medicine, Dr. Habel interned at Stony Brook Hospital. She then served as chief resident of her ophthalmology program at New York Medical College before becoming an Assistant Professor at Rutgers.

The doctor is board-certified in ophthalmology by the American Board of Ophthalmology, which is an independent, non-profit organization responsible for certifying ophthalmologists in the United States of America.

Ophthalmology is a branch of medicine and surgery, which deals with the diagnosis and treatment of eye disorders. Ophthalmologists are experts in the diseases, functions, and anatomy of the eye. They may provide routine care such as vision testing, as well as prescribe and fit eyeglasses or contact lenses. However, ophthalmologists are also surgeons. They repair traumatic injuries to the eye and perform cataract, glaucoma, and corneal surgery.

In addition to English, Dr. Habel speaks Arabic.
