

New house music single "Maschine" by Davide Sakure on May 1, music video out now

Music producer Davide Sakure has shown that music is also a good way to defy boredom during a Corona quarantine.

Berlin, Apr 11, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - The result of the forced withdrawal is a number of tracks, of which the first song "Maschine" will be released as a digital single on May 1, 2020, on all known platforms such as Spotify, Apple, Google, Deezer etc.

But there's also some news from platforms that are very known in Asia because of their focus on Asian domestic markets. From now on Davide's tracks will also be available with distributors and platforms like Melon, Mnet, Genie, Olleh, Naver Music, Monkey3, HMV, their partners and other Asian shops.

"Maschine" is house music with rich bass, brand new beats as well as Sakure's self-programmed synthesizer sounds. After the house single YURAI, Davide Sakure is now adding another driving house track.

The publication of "Maschine" also shows that digital sales channels offer advantages for musicians, DJs and music consumers these days. In the case of "Maschine", there were only a few hours between the completion of the song production and the release announcement from Davide Sakure's music label Planet Apricot. Also, it is very comfortable to buy or stream digital releases like "Maschine" online.

House Music fans don't have to wait for the day of release, because "Maschine" can already be listened to for free on SoundCloud. In addition, a music video was produced within a few hours, which can be viewed free of charge on YouTube, Vimeo and Facebook.

For the music video, for the first time, Sakure's team used a technology that combines images and effects for the final video editing from archive recordings and video effects using computer algorithms based on information generated from the music.

Of course, there was a final cut by an editor before the video was released.
