

The Italian independent rap duo Still G & Slapy drop a new single

“Just Believe” is the name of the song in collaboration with a young R&B talent from Dallas, Quincy Thompson

Milano, Apr 17, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - Established Italian hip-hop duo Still G & Slapy are breaking into spring 2020 with their new pop/R&B crossover anthem, "Just Believe", featuring Quincy Thompson. Available from 17th April on all digital platforms, "Just Believe" blends the duo's classic West Coast rap style with Quincy Thompson's soulful modern vocals, culminating in a feel-good international pop hit that transcends language boundaries. Breaking away from mainstream European urban music, the song features lyrics in English and Italian, with both rappers flowing fluidly between languages.

Still G & Slapy are an independent Milan-based rap duo who have found individual success as producers, rappers, and songwriters. As collaborators, their songs “Collision Course” and “Endless” were a smash in Europe and beyond, with both songs hitting the Top 20 Indie Charts. Influenced by jazz, Motown, soul and R&B, their new release “Just Believe” pays homage to “true” hip-hop while incorporating modern pop elements.

Longtime musical collaborators, the duo shared a similar journey to music, with both artists spitting their first freestyles and writing their own rap lyrics as teens in the mid-'90s.

This year, the duo are set to release more new music under their joint record label, Blue Vibez, which aims to become a cornerstone for the independent Italian hip-hop scene.

“Just Believe” will be released on all digital streaming platforms on 17 April 2020.
