5-Minute Relationship Repair App

Sebastopol, May 12, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - What couple doesn't struggle at times? Especially in these times of Covid-19! Here is an app that helps couples improve communication and stay happier together. And you don't even have to leave home! "After decades of successfully helping couples, we wanted to make this powerful relationship tool available for everyone," says Dr. John Grey, one of the co-inventors of the 5-Minute Repair app.

Repair relationship upsets in as little as 5 minutes.

The relationship repair system implemented in the app has helped thousands of couples overcome negative communication patterns. At the first sign of upset, you can pull out the app. It gives you the right words to calm a situation and repair any upset. And as they use the app over time, partners learn to be better communicators and enjoy more trust and intimacy together.

Carry a relationship coach in your pocket.

Get immediate help, 24/7, whenever and wherever you need it. The app is ready to guide you in real-time. And it puts the couple in the driver's seat again. "Couples needlessly hurt each other when they get upset," says Dr. Susan Campbell, the other co-inventor of the app. "This tool guides them in real-time to immediately turn upsets around and reconnect with each other."

Relevant in the time of Covid-19

The app is particularly relevant in these times. Couples are having increased pressures, upsets, and conflicts. Divorce stats are rising as couples are forced to stay at home together. This app gives couples a way to cope effectively.

About the Founders:

Dr. Susan Campbell,

Susan received her Ph.D. in clinical psychology from University of Massachusetts, Amherst, in 1967, and later went on to become a member of that school's prestigious graduate faculty where she founded their couple and family therapy graduate program. Since then she has worked with thousands of couples, written eleven books on relationships, and trained hundreds of coaches. Her groundbreaking book, The Couples Journey: Intimacy as a Path to Wholeness, published in 1980, was the first popular book that introduced mainstream audiences to the idea of a relationship as a spiritual practice.

Dr. John Grey,

John received his Ph.D. in psychology in 1975 from Stanford University, where he taught and co-founded a major research center. His psychological research has been cited by dozens of university textbooks and thousands of research papers. Since 1990 he has been conducting intensive couples retreats and is a recognized pioneer of this approach. Having successfully helped thousands of couples, he is also a founding faculty member of a prominent couples therapy training organization, teaching marriage counselors and therapists a highly effective, scientific-based approach to helping couples.

Dr. Volker Siems,

Volker received his Ph.D. in anthropology in 2005 from European University Viadrina in Frankfurt-Oder. He has built several successful digital products as a product developer and consulted organizations and management for more than 15 years. As an anthropologist, he is particularly interested in human relations and societal change. He is the founder of the neighborhood network Polly & Bob in Berlin. An almost failing relationship with the love of his life inspired him to found Learning Love 24, the school of love and relationships that is presenting the 5-Minute Repair App.
