

Armando Osuna raises second fund for Meadow Ventures

Fund will focus on investing in both minorities and women entrepreneurs

San Francisco, Jun 17, 2020 (IssueWire.com) - Technology advisor and entrepreneur Armando Osuna raises the second fund for Meadow Ventures a seed-stage investment vehicle focused on games, the future of work, and subscription businesses.

It's not clear at this point how much of the capital Osuna raised came from outside backers. Typical first-time fund managers, raising from traditional limited partners, often aim to start with around $10 million.

Meadow Ventures is planning on directing more seed-stage capital in startups founded by minorities and women. Osuna was an early employee at Kiip, AppsFlyer, Adjust, and CleverTap where he served as the vice president of sales. He also has served as an advisor to several companies including GIPHY and has served as an advisor to several accelerators including the Manos Accelerator, The Refiners, and most recently Techstars.

Armando Osuna declined to comment when we reached out to him.
