

Attorney Jeffery Leving fights for dads in Fathers' Day interview on I Heart Radio

Chicago, Jun 12, 2020 (IssueWire.com) - Nationally renowned family law attorney Jeffery M. Leving, who has been fighting for fathers in the courtroom, in legislatures and in the arena of public opinion for 40 years, praises fathers in an interview with Darryl Dennard that will air this weekend (June 13-14) on I Heart Radio stations in Chicago.

Leving speaks about divorced and unmarried fathers, who are often ignored, taking on critical roles during the lockdown. "Fathers who have brushed aside during normal times are now even more essential for the upbringing of the children, as caretakers and home-schoolers. Many fathers who ordinarily have to fight to be a part of their children's lives haven't given up, and they're doing a great job," Leving says, noting that mothers might have had to work extraordinary hours as health care employees, or may have become sick or even died from the coronavirus, with fathers now gladly shouldering the full parenthood load.

Unfortunately, the lockdown created some friction of its own. Leving tells Dennard about cases his firm litigated and won on behalf of fathers who were being denied their fathers' rights, ostensibly because of the coronavirus. "In one case, the husband and wife were going through a divorce, and she wouldn't let him back in the house when he came home from work, citing coronavirus. In another, the mother just refused to comply with an existing parenting-time arrangement. In my opinion, they were both using the coronavirus as an excuse. We were able to litigate these cases by Zoom, get to court on an emergency basis even while the courts were partially closed, and win on behalf of these dads and children," Leving says.

The interview will air on Chicago Insight at 7 a.m. Saturday on WGRB (1390 AM) and 8 a.m. Sunday on WGCI (107.5 FM), and on Chicago Speaks at 6 a.m. Sunday on V-103 (102.7 FM), CDT.
