Raw food diets are controversial, but the popularity of diets that emphasize raw meat, bones, fruits, and vegetables is rising. By feeding prey model dog food, pet's owner observes a lot of benefits in their pet. Here are some benefits of raw food:

Coat Condition

The first physical change will be in the coat because up to 40% of the protein a pet eats goes into their skin and coat. When a dog is fed a low meat protein, cereal-based diet, then they will not have the protein spare for growing a healthy coat. Prey model raw dog food is high in fresh meat and fresh fat that works together to fuel a luxurious coat.

Muscle Tone

Dogs are predators, meaning all they need to eat is protein. And when they fed a raw diet that will shed the carbohydrate-fuelled fat to reveal their beautiful, sleek, firm body. Prey model diet for dogs is nearly always void of cereal filler (carbohydrates) which is central to getting a dogs weight and muscle tone right.

Dental Hygiene

Cutting out dry kibble and offering a dog some meat on the bone recovers dental hygiene and reduces bad breath. Unfortunately, the fact that dogs have no amylase in their saliva, it means that the sugars in these dry food products fuel bacteria growth leading to poor dental health and hygiene (plaque, tartar, calculus, gingivitis, periodontal disease). By feeding prey model raw food pet's owner avoid the dental problems in their pet.
