Uncover Seized Assets Online With Auctioneer Adam Levinsohn

Fort Lauderdale, Jun 3, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - The premier auction house, Bond Street Auctions, today announced a partnership with auctioneer Adam Levinsohn as it gears up with rapid expansion plans to support the growing demand. With decades of experience in auctioning exclusive luxury merchandise, Levinsohn will conduct Bond Street's monthly in-person auction events, while also leading the live online auctioning of seized premium assets and other high-value items.

"I'm excited to be the face of Bond Street Auctions with the support of a world-class team of specialists who work tirelessly behind the scenes on behalf of our clients. This year, we're rolling out a range of exclusive services and digitally-enabled features to support both our consignors and clientele," said Levinsohn.

"As part of this, we're re-launching our website this month with a dynamic online auction platform. This will enable out-of-state and international clientele to take part in our online auctions in real-time so they can browse our inventory of luxury seized assets and place bids. It'll also help us to quickly process the growing number of consignment requests and help our consignors to take their premium items to the market much faster and to a wider audience. We are constantly rethinking new ways of transacting and creating opportunities to support our wide network of global buyers and sellers of luxury goods. This is especially important considering the economic turbulence caused by the COVID-19 pandemic," he explained.

The new digital auctioning platform will enable buyers to browse detailed descriptions and photos of the large inventory housed by Bond Street. They will be able to take part in competitive bidding for luxury items from the comfort of their homes, anywhere in the world.

The platform will also allow the auction house to accommodate the growing demand for its services from consignors. With access to a wider global audience, consignors will now get the opportunity to sell their masterpieces much faster. The online auctions will further support Bond Street's popular in-person auctions that have built a reputation in the auction world for, especially seized assets.

Over the years, Bond Street Auctions has worked closely with many government agencies with its expertise in bringing luxury seized assets to the market. These are often sold at around 30-70% below market value, making them a popular choice, especially among dealers, collectors, and investors. However, the risk of purchasing seized assets lies in the lack of certification to validate their authenticity and quality. And with Levinsohn's years of expertise in appraising and authenticating luxury merchandise, from fine art to jewelry, buyers will get the assurance of purchasing authentic masterpieces, both modern and old.

In addition to government agencies, Bond Street also works closely with a range of US and international artists, designers, and collectors. It has built a reputation for luxury merchandise and has hosted some of the most exclusive auctions that have attracted a global clientele.

About Bond Street: Bond Street Auctions is a premier auction house that is globally renowned for its expertise in commercial art and jewelry transactions. Its monthly in-person auctions draw in an exclusive network of world-renowned art dealers, pre-approved collectors, and high net-worth clients. Bond Street's inventory includes luxury seized assets, premium artwork, jewelry, and other high-value merchandise.
