Young Entrepreneur Shares His Secrets to Success

New York City, Jul 30, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - A commonly held assumption throughout the business world is those who are successful are veterans who have flourished, in part, through years of valuable experience. However, Brendan Cox, a 19-year-old serial entrepreneur is proving this assumption invalid and proving age is just a number. Rather, meaningful experience and determination are what drive success, and this is achievable at any age. Cox is sharing his wisdom through his first published book titled: Strictly Business: How to Crush it as a Young Entrepreneur. Cox has turned several business endeavors into over six figures in profit today.

The book teaches young entrepreneurs how to turn a formulated idea into a successful business plan. Cox goes in-depth to outline how to create a positive mindset and how to push past the barriers that all young entrepreneurs need to overcome. It discusses the difficulties that these entrepreneurs face in the business world and how to handle the pressure. The book also gives insights on how to stay up to date on trends and how to promote your business in a professional and effective manner.

Today, Cox has founded over 10 businesses and has learned copious lessons through continuous failure and success. Take a step into Brendan Cox's enterprising mind by reading Strictly Business: How to Crush it as a Young Entrepreneur. This book will teach the tips and tricks of becoming a successful entrepreneur at a young age.
