

Acupuncturist to MSL, NFL, NHL players joins SportsEdTV

Dr. Mark Rush's expertise is in non-invasive rehabilitation treatment to sports injuries

Miami, Aug 7, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - SportsEdTV has added Dr. Mark Rush, a board certified acupuncture physician specializing in pain management, sports medicine, rehabilitation and injury prevention to its cadre of health and fitness coaching contributors.

“Our mission to provide a broad spectrum of instruction and education to our athlete and coaching audiences is strengthened with Dr. Rush’s addition to our contributor team,” said SportsEdTV Founder and Chairman Robert Mazzucchelli in announcing the appointment.

Dr. Rush was team physician for DC United and while practicing in Washington DC, he treated professional athletes from a diverse range of sports including top 10 world tennis players, professional cycling, swimming, NFL, ice hockey and basketball.

“Dr. Rush’s treatment of NFL players for franchises in Pittsburgh, Washington, Baltimore, San Francisco and Indianapolis speaks well of his expertise”, said SportsEdTV's CEO Victor Bergonzoli.

He earned a Master's degree in Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine from East West College of Natural Medicine in Sarasota, Florida. Dr. Rush's interest in acupuncture stemmed from overcoming various injuries while playing sports. He also has Bachelor's degree in Health Science.

“I believe in educating patients with emphasis on the psychological condition of the athlete during the rehabilitative phase of healing, which is often overlooked,” Dr. Rush said, adding, “SportsEdTV will help spread that word.”

We also offer a global online community, where athletes, parents and coaches can interact, connect, chat, share content and find new friends.
