Following up on our earlier article, we can today give you a first full look at the England Euro 2020 home kit by Nike. Also, check out the England home kit history for a detailed overview of how the England shirt has evolved through the years. This is the Nike England Euro 2020 home jersey.

The England Euro 2020 home shirt is predominantly white with royal blue, navy, and red. Royal blue is used on England and Nike logos, while the navy will be used for trim alongside red. Based on the Nike 2020 template, which we've already seen on leaked China and Netherlands shirts. Therefore, it has 'normal' sleeves instead of the raglan cut Nike had been using since 2016 cheap manchester united jerseys.

There's a zig-zag stripe design running down the side of the England Euro 2020 kit, just like the one on the Netherlands jersey. It's dark blue with a red-blue center stripe - a detail that's repeated on the crew-neck collar. Just as always with Nike, the Euro 2020 kits, including England's, will be released in March. The England 2020 away kit will be launched together with the home, just like 2016 and 2018.
