PNG image search has now gone to an extremely popular degree as it is implemented in designing the various brand and business layouts in the scope of graphics designing. PNG is currently the most popular format on the Internet as of now. The format was initially created as a format that would be flexible and free from any patents. And the popularity increased over the years especially in the sector of graphic designing and also for personal requirements because of their unparalleled advantages.

Search queries vary from user to user and the team at CityPNG tries to find what people are looking for in their PNG files. PNG offers minimum compression loss and hence the image quality is not changed by any compression ratio. Also, the storage of a PNG file is suitable for its intermediate versions without losing its quality. The color bracket supported by PNG is also very large. PNG-8 identifies 256 colors while PNG-24 identifies about 16.7 million colors that make up for almost every kind of possibility. Supporting multi-level transparency, images have 256 levels of opacity that varies from fully opaque to fully transparent. For advanced designers, PNG formats can also be worked upon in layers and can be directly added to the file meta-data. The files are of small sizes allow easy storage in the device.

PNG images are used in a spectrum of industries from corporate to business, education to marketing and is the visual representation of someone's work. Business logos are very common while logos signifying a certain requirement for personal use are also in vogue. The convenience of this image format has allowed enterprises, both small and large scale to compile their inventory within a small storage space. CityPNG is proud to present its endless library of images and their collection is updated with new, trending ones every day.
