“LAST SEEN OUTSIDE RESTAURANT”

A Long-Held Family Secret-Until NOW!

Today on Facebook.com/JHIMTG, JHIM-first-time author: David W. Tubman and JHIM-The Gap LLC/Publisher are announcing the immediate availability of book versions eBook and Paperback.

The author is the son of two eyewitnesses to the abduction of James Riddle Hoffa as the car he was riding in left the Machus Red Fox Restaurant. They identify the car, the driver, where it went to next, and what was waiting for it when it arrived. David W. Tubman is now uncovering his own ‘Family Secret,’ by releasing to the general public news and information that has never before been revealed-except to the FBI and the families of those intimately involved in the James Riddle Hoffa case of July 30, 1975 (45 Years ago on the 30th of this month).

The book includes an exterior link to a home video of an actual eyewitness as she re-tells the events she and her husband observed between 2:30 and 2:45 pm that Wednesday afternoon in Bloomfield Township, Michigan. Book also provides the FBI transcript of her interview of 2006, as well as other FBI documents and a Dropbox link for additional backup research and items that validate the account.

Reviews and Quotations: “That’s Amazing!”, “Brilliant!”, “The Story’s Got Legs”, “Impossible!” are among the comments the author has received regarding the eyewitness account portrayed in the book when previously presented to the family members, then a few investigative reporters, Mafia/Hoffa experts, bloggers, and a few others.

The author declares:

“I’m in a unique position (possibly the only person alive), who can tell my parent’s story and hopefully inspire others who know more or have a remote memory that fits this account and corroborates the details given as to ‘What happened after Jimmy Hoffa left the Red Fox Restaurant that day.’”

“My parents saw things they were never supposed to have seen, but they didn’t realize what was actually happening till 2-days later (August 1, 1975), when the first headlines read “Jimmy Hoffa Is Missing/Last Seen Outside Restaurant.” That’s when they knew the fate of Jimmy Hoffa, even while the news was simply reporting it as a ‘missing persons’ case.”

Short author bio:

Growing up in Detroit meant you were well aware of the labor unions and Teamster president, Jimmy Hoffa. If you wanted a decent wage, you likely were also in one of the local unions, (Author included). However, most people were simply unaware of the trappings of owning or running a business that relied on Mafia owned services and suppliers, and Kenneth Tubman was no exception. He managed a few restaurants in the Detroit area and even seated notable mob figures who came to dine. He was a quick learner of the 'Who's who?' in the Purple gang and overall mob figures. Teamster president, Jimmy Hoffa would have also been one of them, and his entourage of companions.

Although Ken Tubman never owned the business himself, he made the decisions that ultimately led to a run-in with the Mafia that lasted his entire lifetime. It became the main reason that he never went to the police with the eyewitness account of July 30, 1975.

The book outlines a brief background about who the eyewitnesses were, what they happened to see, and why they didn't report it for decades. The book gives the link (exterior site) where the reader can see the first-hand account by Frances Tubman (wife to Kenneth), and although it was not filmed until 2009, she can recall vividly the memories that had been etched into her memory bank-although she could not recall her own birthday. There are clips from FBI transcripts, background, and more resources for those who wish to follow up on the events surrounding the disappearance of Hoffa. The trail did not end at "Last Seen Outside Restaurant." The Tubmans account covers from the Red Fox to the next destination pretty convincingly.
