The movie "Bakerz Union" is a character-driven urban irreverent comedy if "Next Day Air" met "Friday" and had a baby in 2020. It has a lot of humor welcoming a comedic view of street life without glorifying the gritty hard reality violence of the inner city streets. This movie is funny through and through. This a feel good film that is light and to the point. If you want some fun during these trying times "Bakerz Union" delivers.

Winston, your local hood mailman and his bootlegging friend Greg think they are living their best lives despite the fact they still both live across the street from each other with their mothers and smoke weed all day. But life is catching up to them as they watch all of their friends getting married and moving on with life and let's not leave out the fact they're tired of hearing their mothers say, "Get Out"! Well, their luck is about to change when these two layabouts accidentally intercept a fresh batch of marijuana in the mail, they launch a new edibles empire. However, when the intended recipient notices his packages are missing, this new money-making scheme may create more problems than it solves.
