Ilona's accessories are wearable art. She begins by sketching each pattern by hand, then converts it into digital. Finally, she turns each hand-drawn sketch into digitally-manipulated illustrations which are printed onto fine silk scarves.

When asked about how her patterns and designs can enhance people's appreciation of the natural world, Ilona stated, "My illustrations and designs present my own perspective of seeing the world around us. I like to give the world around us human features, showing the natural world as a part of our world. We're all connected."

These patterns are printed on high-quality, luxury silk and cashmere. It's about offering the individual a product that lasts, combining high-quality fabrics, ethically-sourced materials, and timeless design.

Regarding her long-lasting range of fashion accessories, Ilona Tambor emphasises, "Slow fashion involves buying better quality garments that will last for longer and values fair treatment of people, animals, and the planet. Designing patterns and illustrations that are unique and timeless is what I stand for."

Each scarf is printed and hand-finished in the Lake Como Italy.

Ilona Tambor creates art silk scarves illustrated by hand. With expertise in a variety of art disciplines, Ilona Tambor, founder of her eponymous brand, transforms her patterns and designs into wearable fashion. The brand believes in creating long-lasting accessories that connect the wearer with the natural world.
