Los Angeles, Oct 20, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - Ayra, also known under its pseudonym as “Orange Dumbo Octopus,” is pleased to announce its new single release that featured a talented Swedish pianist. This new song aims to show spirit after everyone fights for the coronavirus pandemic.

One of the year’s most beloved new piano songs, Ayra, released a new song on Spotify and other online music platforms worldwide. The song’s title is “Here We Are,” a beautiful piano composition about life, love, and beauty. The song is now available for purchase at various online retailers. Here We Are is an excellent choice for people who love relaxation and instrumental music.

Its Spotify channel is all about piano songs like no other, allowing music lovers to listen in the background. Typically, people use two hands to play the piano. However, Ayra’s masterpiece wasn’t made through that. Ayra used more than two hands to make the song more powerful and feel differently from a standard piano song.

From the song’s first note, Here We Are is a passionate call to arms. The music motivates peace, growth, change, and possibility. Ayra showcases its vision for the world from a personal plane of understanding and experience. The song’s arrangement enables the depths of its soul and heart to shine through.

“My songs show the most personal and deepest parts of me,” says Ayra. “I am very blessed to share much of such experiences with the people. They have buoyed me up and guided me to build each aspect of myself. I am thankful.”

Ayra uses Orange Dumbo Octopus as a character, which means an octopus with ears. It was based on its desire to make people easily connected to music.

The new single release is a big jump for Ayra, especially from a family who didn’t accept its love of music. The entire family always kept it away from songwriting as the occupation itself does not earn enough income. Despite such difficulties, Ayra managed to conquer it. Now, Ayra is on the way to releasing another piano song, after its successful album, “Summer Love.” Now that Ayra has enough money, Ayra tried to support other professionals by creating its music piece. Ayra aims to help the music industry to produce more jobs, particularly during this pandemic.

On October 18, Ayra launched the song Here We Are, featuring the talented Swedish pianist Mikael Oterthals. The song is something that empowers everyone with the spirit to fight the pandemic, sending messages, “We can survive, so here we are.”

The song is now available on steam platforms: [LINK].

About Ayra

Ayra is known under its pseudonym Orange Dumbo Octopus. The idea of an artist stepping back from a superstar’s persona and being a musician first and only has been lost on many in recent years, but not

Arya. This octopus defines their artistry through a blend of classic compositional roots with melodic, poppy tones from the modern age.
