One of the videos was recorded in the neighborhood where A-Boogie grew up, Highbridge, New York, NY. Monica works with A-Boogie often and she says he's great to work with. Francesca Pinto (@francescasofiap), her part-time assistant agrees.

Monica also booked talent for A-Boogie and Flipp Dinero's new song which came out less than a week ago titled "No No No". The video features multiple scenes, all of which were shot in New York City. Some of the scenes being A-Boogie at a roulette table, a scene at a subway station, and many drone shots over NYC at night. There were a lot of cool special effects in both videos. They had A-Boogie hanging from a street light pole while singing and Flipp dancing next to a car that was on fire. Monica says this was an overnight shoot.

The lead female in the video is from La Creme.
